New & Notable

This dynamic principality is constantly reinventing itself, leading the way as a destination that unites luxury and sustainability, and setting the bar high for ethical (and safe) tourism. Here are the latest developments to help you plan your travels.

FAST AND FURIOUS

Just like in 2021, the Principality will host three Grand Prix events in 2022 starting with the 5th E-Prix on 30 April. The Monaco Historic Grand Prix will take place from May 13 to May 15, two weeks before the Formula 1 event from May 26 to May 29.

CHECK IN TO THE REINVENTED HÔTEL DE PARIS MONTE-CARLO

Monaco’s most iconic five-star hotel recently completed a four-year renovation with additions and enhancements including the opening of the ultra-luxurious Diamond Suite Princess Grace, the Prince Rainier III Suite. There’s also the lush Wellness Sky Club, a rooftop pool with views over the principality. This legendary hotel has intimate links to the royal family: it was the backdrop for many special moments between Prince Rainier III and Princess Grace of Monaco, including the venue for their 20-year wedding anniversary and the 25th anniversary of the reign of Prince Rainer III.

LARVOTTO – A COMPLETELY REDESIGNED SEAFRONT

A completely redesigned seafront! A long-awaited re-opening… in July 2021, H.S.H. the Sovereign Prince officially inaugurated the new Larvotto seaside complex. Residents and visitors alike can now enjoy a much bigger public beach, a stunning new promenade and the return of the area’s “historic” shops. The new-look seaside complex is perfect for all ages, with its shaded promenade and fully renovated beach offering locals and tourists the opportunity to make the most of the waterfront, take a dip in the Mediterranean and soak up the Riviera sun.
HOTEL METROPOLE RENOVATION

One of Monaco’s most iconic 5-star hotels, Hotel Metropole Monte-Carlo, will write a new chapter in its history, with a forthcoming renovation project with a two-phases-renovation project orchestrated by French interior architect Jacques Garcia. This embellishment and renovation will include all guest rooms, the creation of exceptional suites, a redesigned gastronomic restaurant, an enhanced bar, a revamped banqueting room, and all kitchens of the hotel including a world-class open kitchen.

REDEFINED RIVIERA

The boutique three-star Columbus Hotel Monte-Carlo, a property built originally for the racing drivers by former driver David Coulthard, has unveiled new Serviced Residences following a complete makeover in 2018 – this is the place for long-stay visitors who want to reside in a snappy part of the principality, in Fontvieille.

LOFTY GREEN GOALS

Driven by its goal to be carbon neutral by 2050, the principality is dedicated to improving its tourism economy through environmentally conscious initiatives, not in the least the Monaco E-Prix and eRally, but also green transportation, from e-bikes to e-cars to e-boats. Visitors here can rest assured they’re leaving a light footprint – this really is one of the most eco-friendly places in the world, with all public vehicles being either electric, hybrid or bio-fuel.

DIVE IN TO THE REEF

Aussies may not be able to travel to Monaco at the moment, but this petite slice of Europe is certainly getting its taste of the Land Down Under at the moment thanks to the Oceanographic Museum of Monaco. The gallery’s new interactive exhibition, Immersion, is dedicated to the magnificence of the Great Barrier Reef, revealing this World Heritage Site through a multimedia installation offering visitors the chance to experience a dive below the surface and meet the marine species that inhabit the planet’s largest coral ecosystem. Combining contemplation and interaction, the show is designed to engage and educate the public to better protect the marine world.

SHOPPING NIRVANA

Monaco has always enjoyed world-class shopping, but the new One Monte-Carlo precinct – between the Hôtel Hermitage Monte-Carlo and the Place du Casino – takes things up a notch. In addition to boutiques from top designers (Dior, Louis Vuitton, Prada among them), you can look forward to haute-couture snacks at Mada One (helmed by a Michelin-starred chef), all surrounded by a lush new landscaped area, designed to continue the principality’s emphasis on sustainable design.
From the moment you touch down in Monaco (arrive via helicopter if you can), the principality’s attractions are within easy reach.
Historic journeys

Monaco’s history dates back to the 13th century. Here are the milestones.

Although the name ‘Monaco’ appeared back in antiquity, it was in 1297, with the arrival of the Grimaldi dynasty, that the history of the principality began. More than 700 years later, Prince Albert II continues the efforts of his illustrious ancestors.

A few key dates to remember

- 1297: François Grimaldi, a Guelph disguised as a monk, is said to have used trickery to seize the fortress. The memory of this episode lives on with the Grimaldi coat of arms: it features two monks brandishing swords.
- 1863: A new Société des Bains de Mer was created by François Blanc. A casino opened in the Spélugues neighbourhood.
- 1906: Prince Albert I, famous for his scientific expeditions on seas all over the world, founded the Oceanographic Institute.
- 1911: Monaco’s first constitution. The Monte-Carlo Rally was launched. Sergei Diaghilev’s Russian ballet company gave its first performances.
- 1923: Birth of Prince Rainier III.
- 1929: First Monaco Grand Prix.
- 1956: Prince Rainier III married American actress Grace Kelly.
- 2005: After the death of his father Rainier III on 6 April, HSH Prince Albert II became Sovereign of the Principality.

MONACO IN A SNAPSHOT

Monaco’s international reputation undoubtedly starts here, on 202 hectares of land whose 38,300 residents represent 139 nationalities. The Monegasque population totals 9,259. The official language is French, but Italian and English are also spoken well and are widely used in various business fields.

The diversity of museums and places to visit reflects how important art, history and culture are in Monaco. Visiting them is to step into the legend. Read on...

Monaco may be small, but it’s packed with fascinating sights and attractions.

PRINCE’S PALACE APARTMENTS
Perched atop the Rock of Monaco is the Prince’s Palace, the private residence of the ruling prince, all salmon-pink exterior with original 1215 ramparts and solemn carabinieri who perform the changing of the guard at 11.55am every day. Inside, entered through the dramatic Mirror Gallery, the fully restored state apartments reveal a cornucopia of delights: Venetian chandeliers, 16th-century frescoes, a Blue Room lined with blue-and-gold silk brocade, and a Throne Room sporting an impressive Renaissance fireplace. Visitors are welcome, with tickets available from April to October.

MONACO CATHEDRAL
Built in Roman-Byzantine style in 1875 – from white stone taken from La Turbie, a village overlooking Monaco – and situated on the site of a 13th-century church, the Cathedral is an imposing monument whose peaceful interior includes side chapels decorated with statues and paintings. Prince Rainier III (1923-2005) and Princess Grace (1929-1982) were married and are buried here, along with several former sovereigns. Sung mass takes place each Sunday, by the stained-glass windows and under a soaring dome.

BOTANICAL CENTRE
Visit an impressive botanical diversity at the gates of the Principality in the Botanical Centre. Created in the 60s and attached to the Exotic Gardens, the greenhouses here are home to some significant heritage, containing some of the world’s most important collections of cacti and succulents. 10,500 cacti and exotic plants split over three levels are waiting to meet you from Tuesday to Saturday (guided tours possible) … watch out for their spikes!
PORT HERCULE
A natural marina at the foot of Le Rocher – that iconic ancestral Rock – the enormous Port Hercule is Monaco’s only port with deep water. Once used as a trading centre by the Greeks and Romans, it was modernised by Prince Rainier and redeveloped again by Prince Albert II. It now offers mooring possibilities for up to 500 vessels; a modern extension welcomes yachts of up to 100 metres. Take time out at any of the bars and lounges surrounding the harbour for people- (and people-on-yacht) watching, and for crimson sunsets on shimmering horizons.

OCEANOGRAPHIC MUSEUM
Monaco’s museum of marine sciences rises, a palatial monolith, from the side of the Rock in Monaco-Ville. Founded in 1910 by Prince Albert I, the great-great-grandfather of Prince Albert II, and a sea captain given to expeditions, this Monégasque landmark offers visitors a unique opportunity to understand and protect the oceans – a good idea, especially since oceans cover 71 per cent of the Earth. A whale skeleton is on display in the zoology room, while the aquarium has 90 tanks including a shark lagoon. In keeping with the first Prince Albert’s belief that art and science should work together, contemporary art exhibitions showcase some of the international art world’s biggest hitters.

OPERA DE MONTE-CARLO
One of Monaco’s most impressive cultural icons, the prestigious Opéra Garnier Monte-Carlo, designed by Charles Garnier, is home to concerts, ballets, shows and more. All year round it offers an exclusive and varied calendar from the yearly Jazz Festival to opera season.

MONTE-CARLO CASINO
Inaugurated in 1863 by Prince Charles III – who was frankly in need of a money spinner – and redesigned in 1879 by the famous French architect Charles Garnier after he completed the Paris Opera, this famous Monaco landmark is a rococo vision with onion-shaped domes and a constant stream of visitors eager to gaze at the stupendous interior with onion-shaped domes and a series of magnificent rooms feature marble pillars, gilded mirrors and 10-tonne chandeliers. Roulette tables, slot machines and the finery of the over-18 clientele (jackets for the men, please) add a devilish decadence. Not that the Casino is just about high rolling. Charles III also commissioned the adjoining Salle Garnier, a bijou theatre and opera house that seats 524 and opened in 1879 with a performance by the great Sarah Bernhardt dressed as a nymph. Now home to the Monte-Carlo Opéra, the official national company of Monaco, the house’s restored gilt- and red-velvet decor has played host to artists the calibre of Bryn Terfel, Herbie Hancock and the late great Prince.
The Francis Bacon MB Art Foundation is a not-for-profit institution that carries out studies and research on the subject of Francis Bacon. It offers free guided tours to members of the public, by appointment only. These tours take visitors on a fascinating journey into Francis Bacon’s work, life and creative process, with a special focus on the period he lived and worked in Monaco and France. It’s a truly unique and absorbing experience that provides intriguing detail and perspectives on every exhibit. The rooms are themed, allowing visitors to explore different aspects of Bacon’s life and art in this intimate place, with its enveloping atmosphere. Visitors to the foundation can discover around 100 items dedicated to the British artist: paintings, graphic works, photographs, objects found in his various studios, letters and working documents. There are also works by artists who knew Bacon or were influenced by his oeuvre. One room is entirely dedicated to his Parisian studio, where he worked for more than a decade.

The year 1909 marks the beginning of a strong presence of choreographic art in Monaco. This year, Serge de Diaghilev presented his Russian Ballet in Paris for the first time. They set up in Monte-Carlo, which became their creative workshop for the next two decades. Upon Diaghilev’s death in 1929, the company was dissolved. Several personalities and choreographers revived it under various names but it disappeared completely in 1951. The current Ballets de Monte-Carlo Company was created as a result of the commitment of H.R.H. the Princess of Hanover, who wanted to continue the long tradition of dance in Monaco. In 1993, Jean-Christophe Maillot became the head of the troupe. On tour for more than 200 days a year, the Ballets de Monte-Carlo has become a major cultural ambassador for the principality.
Monaco may be pint-sized, but this glamorous Mediterranean principality has big visions on the sustainability front, writes Jane Cornwell.

The Riviera sun floods the cream-and-chrome interior of L’Hirondelle, a waterside eatery with a view of a yacht-bedecked port and the soaring promontory known as the Rock. It’s lunchtime, and sunglasses are donned since it’s bright – and, well, because this is Monaco and mystery is part of the allure.

Some diners, including myself, have come from treatments at adjoining wellness spa Thermes Marins, one of the most opulent health retreats in the world. Luxury is a given in this tiny seafront principality, a two-square-kilometre city-state of 38,300 residents and 56,000 employees, most of whom commute from next-door France and Italy to support the sort of elite tourist industry that comes with casino-glitz and Grand Prix-zoom, with mega-yachts, Michelin stars and upmarket hotels.

HOTEL HAVENS

I’m staying at the legendary Hôtel de Paris, built in 1864 and recently re-glammed by a four-year US$280-million renovation that has increased capacity to 207 rooms including a two-floor Princess Grace penthouse suite with infinity pool and exquisite objets d’art. After lunch I’ll pad back through the cream-tiled tunnel that connects Thermes Marins with the hotels de Paris and Hermitage, another deluxe stay, and stroll around the gardens above Casino Square and into the designer-tastic One Monte-Carlo development, more of which in a moment.

Right now, a silver bucket teeming with snap-fresh vegetables, dippable into delicious pastes, is a reminder that here in Monaco, the finer things in life are very often sustainable. A mission to reduce the state’s carbon ‘foodprint’ has encouraged a prevalence of produce that is locally sourced, organically grown, ethically harvested and minimally packaged.

My seabass (with chestnuts and squash) comes plucked from an ocean where fishing is regulated, endangered species are protected and seawater pumps are used to save 15,000 tons of petroleum each year. My white wine is organic, my water in a refillable bottle.

FORWARD THINKING

Indeed, a wealth of environmental initiatives are ensuring that ‘green’ is intrinsic to Monégasque jojoj. Outside, across Monte-Carlo and all the neighbourhoods of Monaco, air-quality sensors are measuring pollutants being reduced as part of a digital strategy called Extended Monaco: Smart City. E-bikes can be rented via the Citymapper mobile app. An electric car-sharing service offers free access to more than 574 charging points.

It’s all sanctioned by Prince Albert II, who - with his wife Princess Charlene and twins Gabriella and Jacques - officially resides in the 16th-century Prince's Palace atop the Rock near the cobbled streets of the old town, and is frequently spotted living the green life: shopping in the market, walking the Heritage Tree Trail, and steering a solar-powered boat through the harbour. Continuing the legacy left by his great, great grandfather Prince Albert I, a scientist and environmentalist (who happened to own a research yacht called the Hirondelle), the current monarch promotes sustainable development on a global scale via the Prince Albert II of Monaco Foundation, established in 2006.

“If we’re going to save our planet we need to be fighting on all fronts,” Prince Albert has said of projects that span social awareness, business tourism and technological innovation (Extended Monaco intends to minimise cyber risks and protect information systems). “I’m happy to see that the Monégasque population is pursuing my commitment to a greener future.”

GREEN BY DESIGN
Strict environmental guidelines informed the design (by lauded architect Sir Richard Rogers) of the oh-so-exclusive One Monte-Carlo. Seven multi-storey buildings with luxury apartments, offices and conference centres have solar panels on their roof. A pedestrianised high-fashion district with 24 luxury boutiques is landscaped, verdant. Behind 7.5-metre-high windows are luxury giants Cartier, Louis Vuitton, Chanel and Fendi. I visit homewares store Czarina, an interior designer’s delight. Antique boxes from 19th-century China are displayed alongside Art Deco vases and Japanese bamboo flower arranging baskets; a special edition crystal Italian coffee table doubles as a game of ‘babyfoot’ football. Over the way is Mada One, a concept brasserie offering healthy ‘snackonomy’ as devised by Michelin-starred chef Marcel Ravin; I book a table for lunch the next day.

My waiter suggests a small serving from a côte froid menu: green papaya spring rolls flavoured with honey; quinoa with pistachios and pomegranate berries. On one side is a bakery selling espresso to women in kitten heels and carrying tiny dogs. To my right, diners clink flute glasses.

On one side is a bakery selling espresso to women in kitten heels and carrying tiny dogs. To my right, diners clink flute glasses.
On the other side of the glass – in a seawater-filled tank illuminated by soft LED colours and fitted out with sand, pebbles and swaying aquatic plants – eyes stare. Gills flap. The tendrils on a gleaming green disc twist; a rock shaped like a brain seems to ripple. A mini-petrified forest might just be breathing in and out.

“Once you realise that coral is alive, you can sense it,” says Pierre Gilles, mission leader for ocean policy at Monaco’s Oceanographic Institute. This marine science centre is housed inside Monaco’s Oceanographic Museum, a Baroque-style shrine to the sea that towers over the glinting Mediterranean.

Opened in 1910 by Monaco’s great reformer Prince Albert I – whose seafaring expeditions tested the direction of currents with notes in bottles and brought back the whale skeleton that features in the Zoology Room – the museum is acclaimed for its wonders (there are 6,000 live specimens) and its scientific research.

The aquarium boasts a shark lagoon and tanks with bobbing sea horses, shape-shifting octopuses and fish that dart and weave. Outside on a panoramic terrace, two loggerhead sea turtles – emblems of the new turtle rescue centre – glide inside their glass seawater pool.

Out of view, in a room soundtracked by gentle bubbling, coral and algae are grown, nursed and tested in dozens of small tanks. The museum has pioneered ways to keep coral in an artificial environment – and with 60 per cent of coral reefs at risk of extinction, its aware of the urgent need for research into coral reproduction.

The current coral-oriented exhibition, Immersion, highlights the wonder that is the Great Barrier Reef, using technology to create an interactive dive spot, and to virtually mingle with the species living there. It’s all part of an ongoing drive to highlight the necessity of protecting our oceans for future generations.

“The oceans are waiting,” says Gilles, as the trippy colours in the tanks around us appear to sharpen. “And watching.”
From one of Europe’s grande dames to breezy beachfront lodgings with modern trimmings, Monaco’s hotels come with style to spare. Here’s where to check in when you’re next in town.

Describe Monaco’s food scene. I love the diversity of restaurants in Monaco, from highly successful Coya Monte-Carlo, Crazy Pizza, Maya Jah and Maya Bay. We all try to make dishes that are deeply rich in flavour.

Favourite food market? I have a passion for food markets but have a particular crush on Condamine Market, set on Monaco’s Place d’Armes next to the old town. It’s packed with artisanal goodies from local and regional producers.

What dish sums up your restaurant? No single dish sums up my cuisine – everything I make is prepared with sincerity and honesty and love. My cooking is emotional. My cuisine is very seasonal, and as a result, the menu changes from one week to the next. Indeed, I have the pleasure of managing two green gardens, allowing me to reinvent myself and my menu every day. It creates the magic that customers appreciate because it comes from what nature has to offer.

Michelin-starred chef Marcel Ravin offers a bold repertoire at restaurant Blue Bay, located within Monte-Carlo Bay Hotel & Resort and showcasing cuisine that unites Caribbean and Mediterranean flavours in some of the prettiest plates you’ll ever see.

Meet the locals

Here are the trendsetting locals setting the pulse for Monaco’s food and drink scene.
BRICE CACHIA
CO-FOUNDER OF LES PERLES DE MONTE-CARLO

For the freshest seafood in town, head to Les Perles de Monte-Carlo, an oyster bar located at the very tip of the pier of the Port de Fontvieille. Founders Brice Cachia and Frédéric Rouxville, both certified biologists, launched the hangout alongside an oyster nursery and ripening centre, with seafood taken directly from here.

Why are there so few oyster farms in Monaco? The seabed is very deep and it is impossible to create an oyster farm. This is why our production is carried out in a basin with seawater pumping up from the deep.

What makes your oysters so special? Can you describe their taste? Oysters taste like what they eat. We are lucky to have excellent quality plankton (a consequence of the deep waters bordering the principality). This makes for very balanced oysters with a powerful, nutty taste.

Your favourite place to eat out when not at Les Perles? Normally, purists eat oysters without anything. Personally, I like them with a very little lemon zest.

JESSICA SBARAGLIA
FOUNDER OF TERRAE

Terrae’s mission is to establish urban agriculture, particularly ecological vegetable gardens, both in the ground and on the rooftops of buildings in and around Monaco – and globally. The first organic garden was created in the gardens of the Prince Albert II Foundation, replete with olive and orange trees plus violets, covering just 30 square metres and using organic agriculture and permaculture. Today, the company works closely with haute cuisine restaurants and markets around town as well.

How many urban gardens in Monaco? We have two urban gardens in Monaco’s surrounds (one in Beausoleil and one in St Laurent du Var). In Monaco itself, we have five urban gardens covering a surface of 1,600 square metres.

What produce grows well in Monaco? Everything grows well here, luckily, so we can really showcase the diversity of market gardening (vegetables) but also grow herbs, berries and fruit trees.

Why do you think they have been received so well by locals? Because they are organic and responsibly produced vegetables that have not been ‘stressed’ or manipulated and that have been grown in healthy soil and with the beautiful French Riviera sun – the result is a product full of flavour and nutritional value.

Your favourite things to grow? Our specialty is tomatoes. We grow more than 40 varieties.

How do you think Monaco performs as a sustainable country? It has a strong ecological focus, and invests in putting sustainable programs in place to guarantee a more pleasant life for locals. It has this intriguing paradox between luxury and sustainability – electric vans (like mine) beside Ferraris!

Your goals for Terrae? In 2022, we will be in France with Terre de Nice and we will also debut in Belgium with Terre de Tubize. Each is a complete ecosystem, with market gardening, hens, beehives and more.
PHILIP CULAZZO
OWNER OF LA DISTILLERIE DE MONACO AND L’ORANGERIE

La Distillerie de Monaco is the first and only distillery in the principality, producing a handmade collection of liqueurs, spirits and eaux de vie using artisanal methods and selecting only the finest ingredients, with all fruits sourced from a 20-kilometre radius around Monaco. With each sip you will be transported to the azure shores of the Mediterranean, where waves gently lap at your feet and time moves slower on balmy summer evenings.

Why a distillery?
My ambition from the beginning has been to create authentic specialities using the fruits, flowers, herbs and roots that we can source locally. The aim is to communicate the delicious and natural tastes and smells of what surrounds us.

Tell us about your L’Orangerie and Carruba spirits.
L’Orangerie is a bitter orange liqueur, handmade using the fruits of the trees that grow in the principality. It can be enjoyed chilled on its own as a digestif, or in a refreshing aperitif or cocktail. Carruba is a unique liqueur made using the fruits of the national tree of Monaco, the carob tree. We roast the fruit, then macerate and blend a small amount of cane sugar to create a chocolate/coffee/caramel profile which is delicious both on its own, or as a Cafe Monegasque (similar to an Irish coffee, but served both hot and iced).

What citrus do you use in your gin?
We use seven citrus fruits; bitter oranges from Monaco; sweet oranges and lemons from Menton; limes, grapefruits, citron and bergamot. Added to this we use fresh ginger, Sichuan pepper and lemon thyme – all united by juniper berries and coriander seeds. It’s a classic London dry gin, with an explosive citrus finish.

How do you enjoy the gin?
In the summer heat it is hard to beat a classic gin and tonic. Our house serve uses local grapefruit or blood orange slices with a sprig of lemon thyme to garnish. I also enjoy a negroni.

Michelin stars & stylish bars

Whether you are dining at the very edge of the sparkling ocean, or sipping Cristal among the famous faces that frequent its bars and clubs, you are sure to discover that Monaco lives and breathes by its wining, dining and partying, writes Jac Taylor.
Michelin-starred dining

ELSA ★
The elegant Elsa sits virtually right on Monte-Carlo Beach, basking in the light of the sun (and her Michelin star). In fact, chef Manon Fleury oversees kitchens awarded the very first star for an all-organic restaurant. The space’s architectural blue-and-white interiors and 1920s-era rounded patio over the water’s edge create an atmosphere as pristine as the farm-to-table food. The 78-euro menu du marché (market menu) is wonderful value for weekday lunch.

YANNICK ALLÉNO A L’HÔTEL HERMITAGE ★
Excellence, sharing and modernity... These three words embody Yannick Alléno and the restaurant at the Hôtel Hermitage Monte-Carlo perfectly. An evocative menu that’s light, fresh and a union of wellbeing and fine dining. The offer is as simple as it is sublime: a moment of peace and serenity on one of the most beautiful terraces on the French Riviera.

LE GRILL ★
Located on the scenic 8th floor of the Hôtel de Paris Monte-Carlo, Le Grill offers a magnificent panoramic view over the Mediterranean Sea. The roof opens entirely, so you can enjoy lunch in the sun and dinner under a starry sky, with your meal focused on grilled meats and seafood. Head chef Franck Cerutti has worked with Alain Ducasse for 30 years, and his passion for food shines through.

BLUE BAY ★
The reputation of the elegant Monte-Carlo Bay Hotel and Resort was further enhanced when its Blue Bay restaurant and French/West Indian chef, Marcel Ravin, was awarded a Michelin star. With panoramic views of the seaside and (great for gastronomes) tables positioned opposite the open kitchen, it has a menu inspired by Mediterranean and Caribbean flavours, with dishes that feel like art.
At Yoshi, à la carte dishes and set menus alike are created with delicacy, creativity and perfectionism

YOSHI

★ Yoshi, the only Japanese restaurant on the Côte d'Azur to have been awarded a Michelin star, showcases the classical Japanese cuisine of chef Takeo Yamazaki in a contemporary and daring dining room imagined by Didier Gomez. Located in the grounds of Hotel Metropole Monte-Carlo, this is where stripped-back decor combines bright colours, wood and a sushi bar, opening to a small Japanese garden for Zen-like effect. Lunch comes in a bento box; à la carte dishes and set menus alike are created with delicacy, creativity and perfectionism.

LA TABLE D’ANTONIO SALVATORE – RAMPOLDI

Princess Grace and Roger Moore are among the illustrious guests who have favoured this legendary restaurant over the years. Today, the Casino Square space is headed up by young chef Antonio Salvatore, who creates magical menus that unite flavours from the countryside that surrounds: southern Italy and France. There's nothing ordinary about Salvatore's culinary prowess, with many of his dishes almost too pretty to eat. Almost....
The lavish Alain Ducasse temple within the Hôtel de Paris is considered by many to be the pinnacle of fine dining. Its three Michelin stars speak to a menu that reflects Ducasse's incredible artisanship and respect of the region's very best ingredients, served in the decadent surrounds of the hotel's Belle Époque dining room that would rival Versailles itself. Try one of the signature dishes, like raw gambonon (prawns) with rockfish jelly and caviar.
Local secrets

TRUFFLE BISTROT MONACO
Best for: Truffle indulgence
Deep in La Condamine market lies a local lunch secret. Seemingly little more than a casual, walk-up food court stall, this is actually some of Monaco’s richest and most delicious food – especially made with fresh truffles. For the quality of the Italian specialties, from pizza and pasta to meats and seafood – all with truffle generously shaved on top – the prices are surprisingly humble.

LES PERLES DE MONTE-CARLO
Best for: Fresh oysters
There are no ‘real’ tides in the Med, making oyster farming almost non-existent in this area. But biologists Brice Cachia and Frédéric Rouxeville didn’t let that stop them developing their own seafood line. Sit at this atmospheric lounge on the end of the pier at Port de Fontvieille and enjoy a glass of wine and the most beautiful oysters, lobsters and more, right over the water.

One of the three MAYA restaurants World cuisine is at its finest with Maya Bay, Maya Jah and Maya Mia, three gourmet restaurants. With a gentle and welcoming musical atmosphere, an elegant and refined décor, the Maya Bay invites you to take your time. In addition, while Maya Jah provides a Mediterranean cuisine with oriental flavours, Maya Mia offers Italian specialties in a traditionally decorated setting.

CASTELROC
Best for: Meal with a view
What a location, and what a view. Perched on the famous Rocher de Monaco, ‘between the sea and the sky’, this airy, atmospheric restaurant right alongside the palace has been dedicated to serving Monégasque cuisine since the 1950s. Keep an eye on the calendar, as there are special menus depending on the day.

BEEFBAR
Best for: Meat fix
This dining room is like heaven for meat lovers. With its elegant architecture, a relaxed atmosphere and gorgeous views over the Fontvieille port, Beefbar’s menu is dedicated to simple, seasonal and high-quality ingredients.

NOBU
Best for: Mod-Japanese
Japanese celebrity chef Nobuyuki ‘Nobu’ Matsuhisa’s dishes combine Japanese precision and Peruvian exuberance to create a magical fusion that is yearned for by seemingly every A-lister in the world. The signature dish is black cod in miso, but if you are overwhelmed with the sizable menu, the omakase degustation is good value at 95 euros. Monaco’s Nobu is decked out in modern blue and white, to best set off the wrap-around views.
Newly Opened

PIZZ’ARIA
This newly opened restaurant has a rigorous and meticulous preparation of the dough. Each dough is then baked for 2 minutes in an innovative wood-fired oven. Discover where the magic happens, situated on the port of Fontvieille.

IZAKAYA COZZA
Best for New
Gratinated mussels, cuttlefish or shellfish, anyone? Cozza, the latest addition to Monaco’s thriving foodie scene, recently opened its doors only a few metres from Larvotto beach, and its fish and seafood menu is nothing short of delicious. For an intimate ocean-inspired dinner, this is an address to remember.

KOMO
Right in the heart of Monaco, this innovative concept store combines fashion, lifestyle and fooding. KOMO Monaco is “the” hype spot of Monaco and constitutes a true alternative, capable of federating Monaco’s 2.0 generation. The triple starred chef Mauro Colagreco signs a Mediterranean influenced menu, essentially composed of revisited tapas, exclusively for the KOMO Monaco.

LA MAISON DU LIMONCELLO
A brand new boutique workshop located in the heart of Monaco-Ville, specialized in the manufacture of the famous Limoncello du Rocher from the quintessence of the best lemons in the Côte d’Azur.

Bars & Clubs

LE BAR AMÉRICAIN
Best for: Memorable cocktails
This classy establishment won the award for 'hotel bar of the year' in 2019, and remains a must-visit. It's quintessentially Monaco, taking pride of place at the Hôtel de Paris Monte-Carlo, serving up signature cocktails in the leather-and-wood interior or the breezy alfresco patio, and offering a soundtrack in tune with its famous live music program.

LOBBY BAR @ HOTEL METROPOLE
Glamorous and elegant yet inviting, the Lobby Bar turns on the charm throughout the day. Designer Jacques García reinvented the bar and lobby areas to create a relaxed living space, accompanied by music curated by Béatrice Ardisson. You can have a lunch or a dinner there, made by Chef Christophe Cussac.

BUDDHA BAR
Best for: Wow! decor
Part exotic retro-style Orientalism, part lavish Rococo-era mouldings and gilded everything, the Monte-Carlo Casino’s restaurant-bar-lounge hybrid has been one of the city's top spots since it opened in 2010 – complete with the giant Buddha overseeing proceedings and an interior inspired by nothing less than Paris’s Opéra Garnier.

JIMMY’Z MONTE-CARLO
Best for: High-end clubbing
Welcome to an ultra-VIP world, where the turntables are spun by the greatest DJs on the planet and six-litre bottles of champagne are the order of the day. If summers are epic at Jimmy’z Monte-Carlo, it’s also thanks to the club’s amazing dancers and performers. What sleep?

LA RASCASSE
Best for: Party with locals
One legend, two moods: An ‘after work’ vibe with DJs and live acoustic music plus finger food from 5pm until 10:30pm Tuesday to Saturday; then clubbing to dawn, bringing the night to a glorious close with yet more DJ-spun beats. This is the place to go for a great night out, located on a turn in the Monte-Carlo Grand Prix circuit.
What steps should you take when tasting a new bottle?
First, bring the wine to the right temperature: 10 to 12 degrees for whites, and 17 to 19 degrees for reds. Open the bottle about 30 minutes before serving: this will give it time to aerate, which is good for most wines. If it’s a big white or a red, using a decanter is a great option. But be careful – older wines don’t handle rebottling very well, so if you use a decanter, you’re drinking the whole thing!

How do you choose the right wine glass?
Ideally, the bowl shouldn’t be too big – 20 centilitres is good. A big glass can go well with a young wine, which can handle lots of aeration, but it may wear out an older wine.

What does the ideal wine cellar look like?
It’s a highly personal choice. If nothing else, you can stick to the following breakdown: 20 per cent champagnes, 30 per cent whites and 50 per cent reds. The rest is up to you. It also depends on what your goal is. If the idea is to keep the bottles for more than 20 years, you’ll want to go with grand crus. Otherwise, most wines on the market can keep for up to 10 years.

What makes a good cellar, in terms of temperature and humidity?
You should be aiming for 13 to 15 degrees and at least 70 per cent humidity. If you have an underground cellar, one that is naturally cool and humid, then that’s perfect. Otherwise, there are air conditioners made specially for wine cellars, which will allow you to achieve an ideal, self-regulating atmosphere. You should also make sure that there isn’t too much vibration.
One of the world’s wealthiest destinations, Monaco is upping its investment in the environment. Natasha Dragun looks at how to make the most of the principality’s green offerings in 48 hours.
Surrounded on all sides by France and the Mediterranean, Monaco is home to mega-yachts, the Formula 1 Grand Prix and more supercars (Bentleys and Lamborghini galore) than, possibly, Monégasque citizens. But this adult playground is also at the forefront of an inspiring environmental revolution, establishing itself as a world leader in sustainable tourism.

From electric cars to forward-thinking hotels, here’s how you can minimise your footprint when you touch down and stay a while.

DAY 1

9AM
Drop your bags off at newly refreshed Hôtel de Paris Monte-Carlo, the elegant 1864 Belle Époque palace now awarded Green Globe certification for its commitment to the environment. While rooms are lavish – velvet armchairs, silk throws, gilded mirrors, sea views – the hotel’s style does not come at the expense of sustainability. There's a comprehensive recycling program in place, transportation is either electric or hybrid, and initiatives have been implemented to reduce CO2 emissions throughout. Another stay with a green attitude is Hotel Metropole, which prioritises local suppliers, has banned plastic straws and has its own ‘green committee’ to oversee operations.

10AM
Cross Monaco’s yacht-studded Port Hercules by Bus Boat, the electric-powered boat shuttle that forms part of Monaco’s bus network and connects iconic Monte-Carlo with Le Rocher, Monaco’s atmospheric old town.

Travellers visiting the Rock of Monaco who wish to go to Monte-Carlo can also cross the Saint-Martin gardens, descend via Fort Antoine, enjoy a pleasant crossing on the Bus Boat, then take a bus back to the Casino.

The Bus Boat is another form of sustainable transport in line with Monaco’s goal to reduce the reliance on personal cars.

Once off the shuttle, make the most of the facilities at the city’s smart bus shelters. These freshly minted depots offer interactive location displays, real-time transport information and free Wi-Fi.

12PM
Le Rocher thrusts skywards on a pistol-shaped rock, its strategic location overlooking the sea.

Explore the neighbourhood’s labyrinth of medieval lanes on foot, starting at La Condamine Market to pick up provisions for a picnic lunch.

More than 120 years old, the covered space is a riot of colours and aromas, with delis and cheesemongers beside stalls where you can order grilled seafood and fresh pasta.

Explore Le Rocher’s labyrinth of medieval lanes on foot, starting at La Condamine Market to pick up provisions for a picnic lunch.
1PM
Still in Le Rocher, enjoy a short walk to the principality’s first public park, St Martin Gardens, opened in 1816. Wander along paths hemmed by pine and oak trees, then find a grassy perch to spread your picnic rug overlooking the ocean. This leafy haven adds to Monaco’s staggering amount of green space, which now represents more than 20 per cent of the principality and some 23,000 plants.

2PM
Dust off the crumbs and stroll to the Oceanographic Museum, founded by reigning monarch Prince Albert II’s great-great-grandfather Prince Albert I, who created the space to watch over the oceans more than a century ago. Today, its 6,000 artefacts provide an important message about the preservation of global marine environments.

4PM
Leaving the museum, make the most of a new smartphone app. Download Citymapper to determine your nearest MonaBikes, a network of electric bikes installed as part of the principality’s policy to cut greenhouse gas emissions while improving shared mobility and living conditions; the app will also allow you to plot the fastest route to your chosen destination, thanks to detailed options favouring environmentally friendly car- and bike-sharing schemes as well as walking trails and public transport. When you’re done exploring, head back to your hotel to check in and dress up for dinner.

7.30PM
Leaving Hôtel de Paris Monte-Carlo, tap ‘Monte-Carlo Beach’ into your Citymapper app. This waterside hotel is home to one of the principality’s most awarded dining rooms, with seasonal eatery Elsa (open daily from March through October) entering the record books as the world’s only 100-per-cent organic, eco-certified Michelin-starred restaurant. Mod-Mediterranean cuisine is masterfully crafted, with all produce sourced from organic farms located within a 150-kilometre radius.
1PM

It would be remiss to visit the principality and not enjoy a meal prepared by Monaco culinary stalwart Alain Ducasse, at the helm of two restaurants in Hôtel de Paris. With its three Michelin stars, the Louis XV - Alain Ducasse at the Hotel de Paris is as delightfully surprising as ever. The most prestigious restaurant in Monaco is inspired by the Riviera and la dolce vita. Chefs Dominique Lory and Alain Ducasse have created a modern and contemporary menu. Through flavourful sauces, intense broths and fresh condiments, the chef creates and reveals flavours with exactitude and precision.

4.30PM

Monaco's coastline may be small, but it’s certainly mighty, with ocean-loving HSH Albert II ensuring the principality’s waters are well preserved for future generations. Head to Larvotto Beach or the caves of Les Spélugues, both of which are protected marine reserves home to an astounding amount of colourful fish and coral. Time your visit right and you’ll also glimpse turtles, dolphins and migrating whales. If you’re planning to swim, be sure to bring a change of clothes to slip into before your Michelin-starred dinner.

10AM

There’s more time on two wheels this morning. While Monaco has enjoyed an extensive e-bike-sharing network for years, the fleet was completely upgraded recently: 390 state-of-the-art bikes are now available. These high-tech chariots come with pedal-assist technology – a must, given Monaco’s hilly terrain – and can be given a zap at 43 charging stations around town. Use Citymapper to find your nearest ride and plot your route to the upmarket southern suburb of Fontvieille.

11AM

Ditch your wheels and amble along Fontvieille’s Heritage Trees Trail. Among a handful of self-guided green walks across the principality, the trail was established to combat deforestation through different leafy neighbourhoods (the other two being Monaco-Ville and Monte-Carlo). Download a map and tick off plants – there are more than 1,000 – protected by a ‘Tree Code’, classifying them according to age, height and species rarity.
7.30PM
Reserve a table on the terrace at Blue Bay, an applauded restaurant where flavours of the Caribbean and Mediterranean mingle on your plate. Chef Marcel Ravin's masterful dishes include castagnole fish and cuttlefish from Mediterrannée, and his signature slow-cooked organic egg with cassava, truffle and passionfruit is bliss in a mouthful. Ravin also offers a vegan menu featuring produce from the kitchen's gardens, planted in consultation with Terrae. This local crowd is behind some of the most groundbreaking urban organic fruit and vegetable gardens in Europe; it also offers agriculture classes and workshops, like a tasting of edible flowers and herbs. Forward-thinking and sustainable – this is Monaco in a snapshot. 🌿

Dive in, tee off, ace it

From water-based sports to golf and tennis, there are plenty of ways to get your heart racing in Monaco.

GET EXCITED
Sports have always been at the heart of Monégasque life. And since 2015, AS Monaco has been racing in the first division of the French championship. The Roca Team has won three Leaders Cup and one EuroCup. The club is now playing in the Euroleague and faces the best basketball European teams.

Lose yourself in the journey and settle in for rituals that last between two to four days, or pop in for a 20-minute bath ceremony, hammam or body scrub. The vibe is part Oriental simplicity, part Mediterranean minimalism, with a side of French chic.

MUST TRY The signature massage, which includes techniques drawn from yogic, Californian, lomi lomi and Ayurvedic styles.
A principality pastime

A joyous love affair with urban expansion and one of the world’s highest percentages of disposable income makes Monaco a shopping adventure like few other destinations, as Jac Taylor discovers.
Metropole Shopping Monte-Carlo

A destination in itself.

It stands to reason that even the humble shopping centre must be something special in Monaco. Metropole Shopping Monte-Carlo is a fantasy of Carrara marble, Bohemian crystal chandeliers and wrought metal balustrades, open since 1988 and now a firm feature of any visitor’s itinerary to the principality. The complex’s 80 stores and six restaurants include such labels as Kenzo, Gucci and Hugo Boss, but also such essentials as Sephora, a nail bar, health store and (of course) Ladurée macarons.

One Monte-Carlo

The newest district of chic.

This eco-precinct combines vertical gardens and cutting-edge architecture with high-end luxury shopping. Alongside the Place du Casino, the quartier is centred around the pedestrian-only Promenade Princesse Charlène, highlighting a who’s who of luxe boutiques: Balenciaga, Fendi, Chanel et al among the precinct’s 24 lavish stores. There’s no big surprise at finding an LV boutique here, a must-see for its flamboyant window displays and artistry.

mathematical genius of watchmaking Art in Time is a concept gallery dedicated not only to independent and niche brands but to temporary art and photography exhibitions within the spectrum of watchmaking.
This populace and its many visitors love their labels, which means flagship stores for such infamous global haute couture names as Dolce & Gabbana, Hermès and Christian Dior, of course. But the shopping certainly doesn’t end at the designer ‘Golden Circle’ around the Place du Casino. Near the port, you’ll find about 200 high-street brands and indie boutiques, plus the Casino supermarket, in the central ward of La Condamine – but the real pearl of the area is La Condamine Market. La Halle Gourmande is opened from Tuesday to Saturday from 6 pm to 11 pm for dinner. This is where you’ll discover the traditional heart and soul of Monaco, its three zones, terracotta tiles and bounteous Provençal and Mediterranean eateries. Unlike shopping centres and boutiques that close on Sundays (except in summer) in Monaco, this open-air market (producers and florists) is open from 7am to 1pm daily, while the inside market is open from 7am to 3:30pm.

For shopping that strikes a balance between beauty and practicality, the Centre Commercial de Fontvieille is the shopping centre to experience local life. This is where you can browse the cornucopia that is the supermarket Carrefour, ogle 36 boutiques and enjoy a number of nearby museums and sights, such as the Rocher de Monaco overlooking the centre, the Naval Museum and the breathtaking little marina outside.

Zara is found the world over, its in-store collections are varied depending on location. But the outlets in Monaco may have the best range in the world.
Monégasques – as citizens of Monaco are known – have the world’s highest life expectancy, living to an average age of 89.52 years.

The principality covers around two square kilometres – around half the size of Sydney’s CBD, and only two-thirds of the size of New York’s Central Park – making it the world’s smallest country and second-smallest independent state after the Vatican City.

The great, great grandfather of the current ruler, HSH Prince Albert II, was Prince Albert I, a renowned explorer who founded Monaco’s famous Oceanographic Museum. Another famous explorer, conservationist and filmmaker, Jacques Cousteau, directed this space and its exhibitions for almost 30 years.

Monaco pledges to reduce carbon emissions by 55 per cent by 2030 and achieve carbon neutrality by 2050.

Monaco enjoys about 300 days of sunshine every year. The mild Mediterranean climate is quite similar to Sydney.

Before casinos, yachts, luxurious hotels and racing cars, Monaco was known for its production of citrus fruits. Boats would dock at Port Hercule and transport the principality’s fruit around the world.

The enormous wine cellars underneath the Hôtel de Paris currently store a massive 350,000 bottles of wine, including two bottles of cognac that belonged to Winston Churchill, a former resident of the hotel. During WWII, the space not only stored wine but also the hotel’s silverware and the fortunes of some guests.

Monaco is growing – and not just in population. The principality has extended its territory by reclaiming land from the sea. The resulting Fontvieille neighbourhood is today full of gardens and green spaces, as well as a Sculpture Path lined with eye-opening installations.

Monaco is also creating a new area to embody the excellence and conviviality. Mareterra is planned to be a new community of residential, cultural and recreational spaces celebrating the spirit and sensations of the Mediterranean.

Monaco was the first country in the world to be completely covered by 5G, with high-speed technology a given around the principality – even in public bus shelters.

Monaco has a poverty rate of zero. According to the CIA World Factbook, not a single person here lives below the poverty line.
